Spring Break Tidings?!

----- STEVEN JAEGER

It’s here! It’s here! Spring is finally here! Right? As much as I wish to say yes, in all honesty I’m not quite sure! Lol. It wasn’t but a couple of weeks ago that we still had winter weather comfortably resting on our front porches, on top of our cars, and all over the streets with piles and piles of snow and the well-below freezing temperatures that come along with it (again in the negatives)! To be fair, as much as I enjoy Spring and think of the month March as its beginning, I’m just not quite sure if these mountains can be trusted to let the warmer weather come this early. But nonetheless there is still plenty of fun to be had and the views never get old! And as the locals continue to assure me, this is just how Denver seasons go which really aren’t...

...all that bad because as quick as it can become freezing cold the warming light of the sun’s rays melt all the snow and ice away. It’s kind of like a neat little back-and-forth game of weather checkers. And the craziest thing about it, other than me coming up with that ridiculous phrase – “weather checkers” ... I mean, really, who says that?? No one! That’s who! – but even more ridiculous than that is saying things like 24 degrees Fahrenheit feels warm! And I’ve said it... twice! But in my defense when the previous day was -10 it really did feel like “warm weather.” For now, we’re enjoying a week off for Spring break, and the week of March 13 we jump back into the classroom. Which reminds me, this upcoming quarter is the last BV adventure our school’s seniors will have before graduating. Please keep them in your prayers as they get ready to go out into the world.

In the Classrooms:
We've officially finished our third quarter's worth of classes for the BV Preaching Program. Don't take my math for it but I think that adds up to seventy-five cents! XD Okay, okay, enough with the hilarious jokes... those better not be crickets I hear! Anyways, it continues to be a wonderful and life-changing blessing to be here learning from the multitude of teachings, insights, and perspectives from the different staff members, who, through their personal experiences of...

...persevering and enduring through the Lord's testing fires have been led to where they are now in service of God's Kingdom. Everyday that goes by proves to be more encouraging and edifying with respect to the purpose that God has allotted for my time here – to be trained to serve His Kingdom in ministry with others by learning about Jesus and the love He always has for me, the rest of the world, and how that shapes our relationships with each other.

This upcoming quarter will be bittersweet. Our very own Wayne Burger will be relocating to New Hampshire at the end of the Spring '23 Semester with his wife to continue fulfilling the Lord's Command in his life to make disciples of all nations. It has been a very special blessing to get to know and learn from Wayne and his family. We are all going to miss them very much. I ask for your prayers for his family and the school with these upcoming changes. I'll share more about this with you later. If you're not already connected with him on the Facebooks you should send him a friend request! :)
